Summary of reasons for decision:

The publication is classified as objectionable as it tends to promote and support the exploitation of young persons for sexual purposes and contains strongly degrading, dehumanising and demeaning sexual conduct.

A trailer for the publication entitled Bubblegum Virgins places a strong emphasis on the young women's youthful appearance as the primary arousal element for the viewer. The young women are presented as teenage girls with brightly coloured underwear with girlish patterns. During the 1 min 18 sec trailer the women blow bubblegum bubbles and lick lollipops to accentuate their youthful demeanour. The title also plays a part in reinforcing the youthfulness of the female participants. The performers are clearly young women role-playing for an audience who fantasise about sexual activity with teenage girls. The publication justifies the idea of men having sex with teenagers, and presents teenage girls as sexually available. Therefore the publication tends to promote and support the exploitation of young persons for sexual purposes.

The trailer Hey Gang Teach Me To Bang contains depictions of women in sexually contrived positions that reduce them, and women and general, to servile sexual objects who strongly degrade, dehumanise and demean themselves for male sexual arousal.

The Classification Office offered excisions to remove the two trailers from the publication, which would have resulted in the publication being classified as R18. The excisions have been refused, therefore the publication is classified as objectionable.

Considerations under s3(1), s3(3), and s3A of the Films, Videos, and Publications Classification Act 1993 have been weighed against the right to freedom of expression set out in s14 of the New Zealand Bill of Rights Act 1990. Depictions that promote and support the exploitation of young persons for sexual purposes and sexual conduct that dehumanises and demeans women to a high extent render the availability of the publication likely to be injurious to the public good. This restriction is reasonable, justified and in accordance with the law. Limitation on the publication's availability is the minimum restriction that can be applied in order to prevent likely injury to the public good.
